

Meeting India's President, Draupadi Murmu

I had an inspirational meeting with the President of India, Draupadi Murmu in December this year. It was a privilege to be part of an interview with her for a forthcoming book on Indian Women in Politics by Dr Nitya Khemka, a Cambridge academic and public health specialist. As lead researcher for the book, I worked on the research and framing the questions which I was able to ask her directly as well. Coming from a tribal background and growing up in a simple hut, her sagacity, determination and strength have left a deep impression on me.

